

Be Safe, Carpenters.
 In many cases, it's the lack of proper training and safety education on the job that leads to accidents. So, if you're the one doing the work, make sure you're getting the proper training and safety education. And if you're the one hiring, make sure you're hiring someone who's got the proper training and safety education. It's the only way to keep everyone safe.

4 bank robbers get life terms

By Phil C. Sison

THE MANILA TRIBUNE, (PNA) — Four bank robbers were sentenced to life terms in a Manila court today. The court also ordered the confiscation of the vehicles used in the robbery.

The court, presided over by Judge E. S. Sison, found the four robbers guilty of the September 1994 robbery of the Manila branch of the Philippine National Bank. The robbers, all men, were caught after a chase that lasted for several minutes. They were then taken to a police station where they were interrogated.

From a mothers' home, a children's school rises

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The intervention group (n = 20) participated in a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week. The control group (n = 20) remained sedentary. The primary outcome was the change in the 6-minute walk test (6MWT) distance. Secondary outcomes included changes in body mass index (BMI), resting heart rate (HR), and health-related quality of life (HRQL) measured by the EuroQol-5D (EQ-5D) questionnaire. The 6MWT distance increased significantly in the intervention group compared to the control group (p < 0.05). BMI, HR, and EQ-5D scores also improved significantly in the intervention group (p < 0.05). The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can improve physical fitness and HRQL in sedentary, middle-aged women.

When the two systems interact, the combined system is not in a stationary state, and the interaction produces a new stationary state. The stationary state is the result of the interaction between the two systems.

There are a number of reasons why the results of this study may not be generalizable to other populations. First, the sample was relatively small and consisted of a convenience sample of students from a single institution. Second, the study was conducted in a single institution and the results may not be generalizable to other institutions. Third, the study was conducted in a single country and the results may not be generalizable to other countries. Fourth, the study was conducted in a single time point and the results may not be generalizable to other time points. Finally, the study was conducted in a single population and the results may not be generalizable to other populations.

Abstract The study reports on the growing concern with computer-mediated learning environments in schools in the United States. The authors discuss the implications of this concern for the design of learning environments and the role of the teacher.

Two features of the school districts that were examined are the size of the district and the number of schools in the district. The number of schools in the district is a variable that is used to control for the possibility that the results of the study are due to the size of the district. There is a lot of talk about the importance of the "bottom line" in business. But what if the "bottom line" is not the only line that matters? What if there are other lines that are just as important, if not more so? This is the question that the author of this book asks. He argues that the "bottom line" is not the only line that matters. There are other lines that are just as important, if not more so. These lines are the lines of the heart, the lines of the mind, and the lines of the soul. The author argues that these lines are just as important as the "bottom line" and that they should be given the same level of attention and respect.

Oil prices plummet to new 5-month low

NEW YORK—WORLD OIL PRICES PLUMMETED to new five-month lows here Friday despite forecasts by the Opec cartel of a rise in energy demand this year, especially from rapidly growing China.

Investors were also monitoring US energy stocks and changing weather patterns across the northern hemisphere ahead of winter.

New York's main contract, light sweet crude for delivery in December, dipped 20 cents to close at $56.14 a barrel, its worst finish since June 15. At one point, the contract was as low as $55.40.

But in London, the price of Brent North Sea crude for January delivery rebounded by three cents to $54.88 a barrel.

"I think that's just a little bit of end-of-week short-covering," Rector analyst Marshall Breaves said of the decline in New York.

"We're moving into the winter season so heating oil prices are bound to consolidate here. But we still have plenty of crude oil in storage so there's no fundamental reason for crude oil prices to move higher," he said.

Barclays Capital analyst Kevin Morris disagreed about the market trend.

"The arrival of cooler weather in parts of Europe and the US, stronger US weekly oil data and a pickup in Chinese demand indicators all suggest that the downturn in crude oil prices may now be coming to an end," he said.

But Morris added, "The market probably needs a burst of much colder weather to jolt it out of its current bearish mood."

New York crude futures have shed nearly 21 percent since striking an all-time high of $70.85 on Aug. 30, after Hurricane Katrina tore through US Gulf Coast energy facilities.

Recent mild weather in the northern hemisphere, which has since begun to turn colder, has granted refiners time to rebuild stocks.

However, demand for crucial heating fuel is forecast to soar when winter proper kicks in.

Opec had forecast on Wednesday that global demand would increase by 1.2 million barrels per day this year, downplaying the idea that recent prices had resulted in "demand destruction," whereby higher costs erode demand.

The Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries said in its November report. "Following six consecutive monthly downward revisions, world oil demand has shown signs of recovery in the last couple of months."

"Further undermining the arguments for 'demand destruction', these higher figures are supported by vigorous preliminary growth data from developing countries, a brighter outlook for the world economy and a rebound in Chinese apparent demand."

Aaron Trading analyst Phil Flynn noted: "This sign that OPEC is seeing better demand could be an ominous sign that the China oil consumption machine will once again catch oil market watchers off-guard."

Men have Viagra, now 'love drug' for women just a sniff away

WASHINGTON—A NEW INHALER-DELIVERED love drug for women and men is threatening to do Viagra one better, putting anyone with dysfunction in the mood, US media reported Friday.

Sex experts say the drug, known as PF-141 and which is in final trials before US Food and Drug Administration review, will be the boon for women with desire woes that Viagra has been for millions of impotent men.

"The bottom line is that women have been really shortchanged," said Laura Berman, author of "The Passion Prescription: Ten Weeks to Your Best Sex—Ever!"

"Hopefully, this will be another option for women with physiologically based sexual dysfunction," Berman said. For now there is no pharmaceutical option for female dysfunction comparable to Viagra; women have largely been limited to seeking counseling or therapy.

New Jersey-based drugmaker Palatin Technologies expects it will take several more years before the drug goes to market.

PF-141 is a copy of the hormone that stimulates the melanocyte-receptors in the brain that play a role in sexual arousal.

Unlike Viagra, which gets the blood flowing in men, it goes straight to work on the mind, in both sexes.

"It affects the central nervous system," said Berman. "It affects desire."

In lab trials, female rats exposed to PF-141 immediately began seeking out male rats for sex.

New York magazine reported that women who took part in trials within minutes felt a "tingling and a throbbing" along with "a strong desire to have sex."

Men told the magazine a snort made them feel "younger and more energetic" as well as eager for sex.

"You get this humming feeling," one man told the weekly. "You're ready to take your pants off and go."

Michael Perelman, co-director of the Human Sexuality Program at New York Presbyterian Hospital and a sexual-medicine adviser on the PF-141 trials, told the magazine: "It's not merely allowing a sexual response to take place more easily. It may be having an effect, literally, on how we think, and feel."

The author of the article, Julian Dibbell, stressed that though the company plans to market to those with dysfunction, "the potential market for PF-141, in short, is all of us. And the potential transformation of the modern American sex life is no less sweeping."

"Consider the precedent: Just more than four decades ago, it was another drugs arrival in the marketplace that triggered what would eventually be called the sexual revolution. Before the advent of the birth-control pill, sex and procreation had been eternally, inseparably linked. After it, the link was pretty much optional."

"Momentous things ensued: women's liberation, gay rights, the abortion controversy, all of them arguably the pill's indirect consequences, all of them reverberating to this day," Dibbell wrote. "And if all that can follow from a drug that simply made pregnancy less a matter of fate than of choice, what then to expect from a drug that does the same thing to passion itself?"

Detailed description of Figure 1: The graph plots the percentage of total protein in the supernatant fraction (y-axis) against the percentage of total protein in the pellet fraction (x-axis). The x-axis ranges from 0 to 100, and the y-axis ranges from 0 to 100. Data points are shown for several proteins: IgG, BSA, PEG, and others. For each protein, there are two data points: an open circle representing the 'Control' and a filled circle representing the 'Treated' condition. The legend indicates that open circles are 'Control' and filled circles are 'Treated'. The data points are scattered across the graph, with some showing a clear shift from the control to the treated condition.

percent to 26 percent.

Buena said Alcuin presented a classification system of regular cooperative members based on merit incentives.

From then on, BPMPC members were ranked AAA, AA, A, B, C and D according to their credit worthiness.

AAA members to B members enjoy loan accessibility privileges with no co-makers required and are eligible to become officers.

AAA members are those who have been with the cooperative for at least five years, with share capital of not less than P15,000 and with an average active deposit account balance of P1,500.

The privileges provided narrow as the classification slips to B—those who have been members for two years, share capital of at least P5,000 and an average savings deposit balance of P600 or more.

The "B"-ranked members can receive their loans a day after approval of the application.

Buena said the results of the merit incentive system classification have been remarkable in terms of commitment and participation of members in all co-op activities.

Complementing the merit incentive system is an intensified campaign to collect on delinquent members, with the cooperation of barangay authorities. At the same time, co-op officers consistently remind the members of their obligations through text messaging and other forms of communication.

Since then, Buena said members' attendance in all cooperative activities ceased to be a problem.

During a general membership meeting, they could get a 98-percent attendance level from the existing 3,503 members, he said.

Buena said the BPMPC board and the management remain dedicated to the basic cooperative principles of service, transparency, democratic participation and decision-making processes.

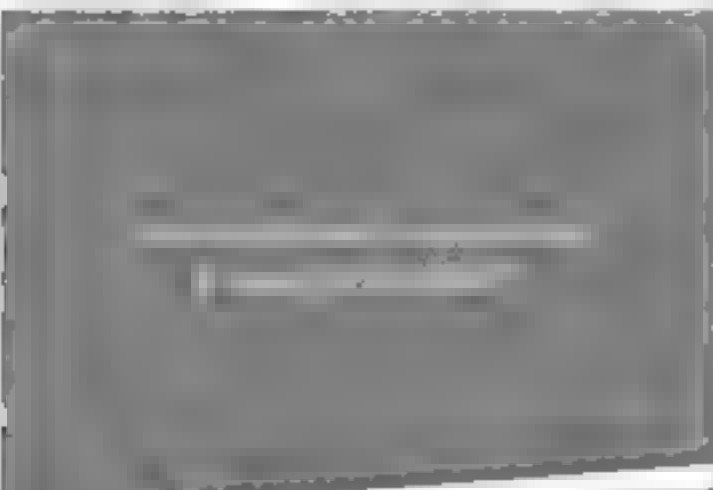

He said that even as the cooperative has grown from the original paid-up capital of P1,193 in 1963 to P43 million at present, the salaries of the employees are kept at a minimum and the board members are only provided with honoraria of P800 each.
